TRAIN WRECKED FIREMEN HICKEY KILLED

OTHERS WOUNDED---ENGINEER BALDWIN WORSE TODAY.

Particulars of Yesterday's Disaster on the Narrow Guage at Oakland Wharf.

A painful disaster occurred yesterday afternoon on the narrow-gauge local line between Alameda wharf and Oakland. An entire train was wrecked at the point where the trestle runs onto the newly filled ground, John H. Hickey, the fireman, was crushed under the overturned engine, where he was held while the escaping steam scalded him. Engineer Edwin L. Baldwin jumped. His face and hands were scalded, but his injuries will not prove fatal. Not another person was injured, although there were about 200 passengers on the train All five cars left the track, two of them being thrown on their side and piled partly on the overturned engine.

The train going toward Oakland connected with the 1:45 boat from San Francisco and left the depot at the end of the Alameda wharf at 2:05. It was a trifle late, and was traveling at the rate of about thirty miles an hour. At the point where the train leaves the trestle there is a slight curve. Engineer Baldwin wanted to make up his lost time, and he gave his engine a little more steam when he ran on to the ground.

Fortunately there were but few passengers in the smoking car, and these soon crawled up through the windows. When the train men had rescued the engineer the passengers were all seated upon the upper side of the overturned cars surveying the wreck. Conductor Toye and Brakeman Bird went to the assistance of the passengers but they found no one to assist. One man was slightly cut by flying glass.

Baldwin was found a few moments after the wreck wandering blindly on the harbor training wall and trying to get into the salt water to cool his burns. Conductor Toye found him there and prevented him from getting into the water. A steam launch belonging to Mr. Prather was in the harbor and came up as near the training wall as the high wind would permit. Train hands helped the engineer to the launch and he was taken to the receiving hospital.

Engineer Baldwin is somewhat worse today, but the hospital authorities are confident that he will be all right in a few days. While his wounds are painful they are not serious.

Friends Church.

The morning service at the Friends Church was conducted by Rev. W. C. Stephens of Los Angeles. Rev Stephens is a traveling evangelist and leader of the Christian Alliance Organization of the Pacific Coast. He chose for his text "The judgments." "Many judgments are cited in the Scriptures," said the speaker, "and give rise to much confusion on the part of Bible students if not carefully distinguished. God's judgments upon the children of men are invariably executed through the agency of his son, Jesus Christ.

The first great judgment was that passed upon Adam, and through him upon generations that were to follow. Rom. lviii, 18. These generations are delivered from this judgment by a second Adam on condition that they accept the latter as their deliverer. This may be called the judgment of life and death. Christ alone is able to remove the iniquity of every human creature. Man's own righteousness will not save him. John, v., 24. "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ. II Cor., v., 10.

A second judgment is that passed upon the life work of Christians by Christ at his second coming. A variety of superstructures may be erected upon a given foundation, (I Cor., iii, 9, 10) but only one is enduring This judgment will take place in mid heaven upon the throne now occupied by satan, after the latter shall have been expelled by the power of Christ. The saints, both dead and living, will there receive their several rewards.

The next judgment will fall upon those who are living when Christ shall come to bind satan, and to institute the millenium, while the last one will be that before the Great White Throne, when the wicked dead shall be resurrected to receive punishment according to their unrighteous deeds. Rev., xx.

Union Service—Methodist Church.

Members of the Methodist and Baptist churches held a union service last evening, Dr. Chapman of Oakland being the speaker. Dr Chapman is at the head of the Anti-Saloon League of Northern California, and spoke in the interests of that organization. He prefaced his remarks by saying that there are 13,600 saloons in California, while in Mississippi with a population of 80,000 more, there are but 377. The saloons of the former State cost its people for criminal prosecetion, support of indigents, etc, $4,000,000 while those of the latter but $400,000. $4,000,000 worth of liquor is sold in the United States daily; every five minutes of the twenty-four hours sees a drunkard drop into eternity, and some one step into the place vacated on earth.

In Mississippi, where local option law prevails, there is one saloon to 3500 people; in California, one saloon to 99 people, or one for every 20 voters

The speaker attributed the success of saloon men to their effective organization. They assail in solid phalanx everything pertaining to good government and good morals.

The Anti-saloon League undertakes to unite all friends of temperance irrespective of party affiliation. To do this it first eliminates every issue about which there can possibly be any difference of opinion, and concentrates all its energy upon the one sssue about which there can be no difference of opinion on the part of temperance workers. "We will do," said the reverend gentleman, "what Admiral Dewey did, take fine sight at the point we want to hit." The league proposes that the state legislature shall be called upon by the people of the state to formulate better laws—laws that will permit the free exercise of the principle of local option, and the question of saloon of no saloon can then be submitted upon the Australian ballot system to every voter at every annual election. The all important question will thus be kept continually before the people This is just what the saloon men do not want. A man who supported a very large family was asked how he managed to do it. "I find out what they don't like, and then give them plenty of that," said he. This is the kind of support the league proposes to give saloon men. It proposes that the verdict of the people respecting saloons, whether in ward, city, county or state, shall be the law of that locality. This is a fundamental principle of American government, and those who oppose it allow selfishness to eclipse patriotism. Until better laws are enacted, the league proposes to make the most of those already existing and thus secure, step by step, the final expulsion of the rum traffic. A paper in the interests of the organization, to be called "The Search Light," is soon to be published in Oakland.

West Berkeley Presbyterian.

Morning, May 22d—The sermon was in reference to the close of one year since the pastor first preached to the congregation. The text was from the words of Moses to the people of Israel when in their first extremity after leaving the land of Eygpt; "Go Forward." After speaking briefly of the unexpected success of the past year, the pastor said the church should be encouraged to go forward in the face of every difficulty. If obedient to the voice of God in making the attempt, the success of the effort can safely be left with Him. We must go forward in personal Christian life, and in the effort to bring others into the kingdom of God. This is the set time for God to favor this church, and if all will come up to the help of the Lord, He will give them the victory.

Evening—In the evening the topic of discourse was from Haggai "Consider Your Ways." The prophet made complaint that the people to whom he spake were faithful to their own comfort, but forgetful of God and His worship. Therefore he said, "Consider your ways." This means to sit down and talk it over and come to an intelligent decision. No one is forced to obedience. Willing service is prized in the kingdom of God. Few deliberately conclude not to serve God. They determined not to do it, and then put it off. They are called upon to consider, to take it to heart. Men are thoughtless, especially in spiritual matters. "Evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." The evil tempter is said to rejoice greater over having secured

DEATH OF W. L. PRATHER.

A LONG AND USEFUL LIFE AT AN END.

Institution for the Deaf, Dumb and Blind Loses its Secretary and Treasurer.

W. L. Prather died Saturday morning, May 21st, at his home, Tenth and Filbert streets, Oakland. Mr. Prather had enjoyed a long and useful career in California. Born seventy-two years ago in Kentucky, he removed with his family in 1872 to Oakland, where he has since resided. He became largely interested in schemes for reclaiming waste lands along the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers. He was also widely known in this vicinity as a successful business man.

Fourteen years ago the 1st of last April the directors of the Deaf, Dumb and Blind Asylum of this city elected Mr. Prather as secretary and treasurer, which office he filled with honor until his death. Not once during all these years, until his last sickness, did he miss a meeting of the board. He was the fourth one to fill the office during the superintendency of Mr. Wilkinson. He preferred his fireside to other attractions, and leaves behind him an enviable record as a loving father and faithful husband.

The funeral took place this afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence.

A Child Accidentally Poisoned.

The little two year old son of H. Marcus of West Berkeley suffered a severe attack of poisoning last Friday A GAZETTE reporter called at the store this morning and found that the family could give no details further than that the child was poisoned by strawberries or jelly, but probably it was the berries which caused the trouble. A physician was called and relieved the little sufferer, who is now quite well again.

Messrs. Allan Tominson and Chas. Williams of Whittier, after having visited with friends a day in Berkeley, left this morning for Pacific Grove to attend the summer school.

Correction.

The commencement exercises at the Institution for the Deaf, Dumb and Blind will be held in the chapel of the institution on the afternoon of June 7th instead of June 1st as previously announced in these columns.

THE EVENING GAZETTE.

In compliance with the announcement made in the GAZETTE last Saturday the paper today resumes its evening visits to its many friends in Berkeley and elsewhere. It will be the endeavor of the new management to make the GAZETTE a true reflex of the city of Berkeley, and secure that position so desirable in the career of a newspaper, and a most valuable consideration from every point of view, that of commanding the respect and confidence of its constituents, and the general public. We have no long list of promises to make, and have no contract for revolutionizing the world by some new political scheme, or by any full grown fad. We simply mean business, and, although the initiatory of the venture is not what one might desire, it is a matter of no moment to the patrons and public; hence, the promise to do the best we can is an undertaking of sufficient latitude for either the ordinary or the extraordinary human. Vivat GAZETTE!

GLADSTONE.

Gladstone is dead. This sad note echoes and re-echoes the world over. Men of every land pause in the busy walks of life and reverently pay tribute to the memory of the Grand Old Man. What an example of human greatness! What a fitting crown—the works of this life just ended—to the unparalleled achievements of an unparalleled century! Twilight broods over the earth, but the dawn of a new era will soon break. Then must youth, full of life and vigor, seize the helm of the ship of state, but the compass—where is it? Unexpected difficulties will surely arise; treacherous shoals, unseen save to the eye of wisdom, are ever present. The young navigator will realize in an hour of extremity, if not before, that a guide is indispensible. Let him, then, heed the lessons of Gladstone's life so clearly traced on the world's finger-board of experience; let him steer toward the landmarks erected in the unexplored realm of reform legislation by England's honored pioneer.

It has often been said of great men that they lived far in advance of their time. Seldom, however, has it fallen to the lot of one of these to lead his fellow-men to his own frontier point of view while yet he dwelt among them. Rather did they come to realize the wisdom of his counsel and strive to follow it, decades or even centuries after his death. Gladstone, on the contrary, by earnest devotion, by an almost superhuman display of energy, and by a persuasive eloquence at once capable of disarming opponents and inspiring supporters, achieved the goal upon which his eagle eye had been fastened with the majority of his countrymen in solid phalanx at his back. The abolition of the state church in Ireland, the reform of the Irish land tenure system, the abolition of the purchase of commissions in the army, the introduction of the system of voting by ballot, and of the scheme of national education—these stand as mile posts in English legislation, and as beacon lights on the horizon of the world's advanced civilization. The great leader would fain have persuaded Englishmen that home rule alone would solve the national difficulties of unhappy Ireland; but there is a time limit to human achievements, though they may transcend other bounds. Age palsied the strong arm and clouded the brilliant intellect of Gladstone, before his herculean labors were entirely completed.

Gladstone's life will ever stand as a stern rebuke of that wide-spread sentiment which holds that a statesman cannot be at the same time a Christian gentleman. No small amount of his powerful influence was due to a singularly pure and noble character which led men to trust him implicitly. He was England's "Honest Abe," and will be regarded by future generations as one of the most distinguished sons of the century. From every civilized nation men hasten to take part in the last sad rites. The New World joins hands with the Old in the hour of her unspeakable grief. Gladstone is dead, but the memory of his good deeds is traced in letters of gold on the imperishable scroll of history.

BUILDING UP BERKELEY.

There is a very perceptible increase in the number of buildings being erected in Berkeley, especially in the residence line; and yet the building season is just beginning. Very naturally will a stranger coming into Berkeley and canvassing it for the purpose of selecting a residence, conclude there is already a surplus of residences; but he should remember that this is now the time of vacation, especially of the student-citizen, and also that as this class is constantly increasing as the years come and go there must be a constant increase in houses, and it is wise therefore to have a surplus, if indeed it will be possible to maintain one hereafter. The present surplus of houses, it is very noticeable, is composed almost entirely of large, high-priced properties, too large for the purposes of most people, even of ample means. Properties for rent under $18 per month are quite scarce at almost any time of the year, especially in convenient and desirable localities. The person or persons who take advantage of this condition, for a moderate number of neat cottages, will hit the happy medium and find a ready and profitable market.

It is gratifying also to see that all new business buildings now being erected are of better structure and more modern in architecture. This is very desirable, as a city or town is largely judged and criticised by the class of business houses on its main streets as well as its residence portion is judged by the general appearance of its homes. It may truly be said that beautiful Berkeley is growing more beautiful as the months pass.

BOUND FOR THE PHILLIPINES.

The Charleston steamed westward, bound for the Phillipines, yesterday morning with her compliment of soldiers. Patriotism ran high at the Presidio as the cruiser headed out to sea, and every one who could make a sign of enthusiasm, whether with voice, tin pan or otherwise, lost no time in doing so.

It is not altogether edifying to see some of our large and "progressive" contemporaries claiming honors for first place and service in the Red Cross work. It should be remembered that Berkeley organized the first society and was actually at work before any other city or locality. Surgeon General Greenleaf has the honor of suggesting it, and also of assisting in the organization of this first society. But that is the way that some people own the earth—by claiming it.

It is just enough to make one feel proud of the American way of doing things to witness the greetings given the thousands of soldiers as they march up Market street, San Francisco, on their way to quarters. There are thousands yet to arrive, and if you are in the city you will find room for more cheers. Try a few.

UNCLE SAM IN DEMAND.

As to the matter of humanitarian intervention, the Los Angeles Times says:

"Ireland is now clamoring for American intervention. It is evident that Uncle Sam is being looked to as the corrector of all the world's troubles, but while this nation is doubtless equal to any emergency, it is hardly likely to engage in any further humanitarian enterprises than the one now in hand."

Along the same line of thought the Santa Cruz Sentinel remarks;

"The revolution was fought for freedom, the rebellion was fought for freedom, and the present fight is fought for freedom. The Americans first fought to make themselves free, then fought to free the negroes, and now they are fighting to free the Cubans. Who knows but what the Americans may make the world free? We are the successful contestants for freedom, and there is freedom in the blood of all intelligent men."

GERMANY IS FRIENDLY.

The German foreign office, in making a statement to the Berlin correspondent of the N. Y. Staats-Zeintung, contradictory of statements of the yellow guild, uses the following comprehensive language:

"We make no defense of Spanish misrule in Cuba, and have absolutely no interest in seeing it maintained or in preventing the separation of the island from Spain. Of course if the island is separated from Spain very suddenly the mother country will suffer and the monarchy will be imperiled. Nevertheless, we shall not intervene under any circumstances whatever; if for no other reason on account of our existing commercial relations with the United States. Our desire is to maintain intact our friendly relations to America which have never been disturbed during the last hundred years."

GENERAL GRANT used to entertain the idea that all personal misunderstandings would keep until the war was over. Grant had a good, old-fashioned notion that it was his duty to dispose of the country's enemies first, and then, if necessary, adjust petty misunderstandings and jealousies. After all, it is a sort of an American idea, and may never go out of fashion.

THAT fleeting fleet of Spain must have heard of the Sampson of old. Sampson may as well wait until his enemies swing around the Atlantic again and accidentally get in the way. It will save coal and be just as effectual. If Cervera finds Sampson it will be an accident on his part.

The Charleston has a long voyage before it, but everything is in good trim, and good time will be made. When the relief expedition arrives at Manila things there will assume a more permanent shape. At present the weather is fine in the Phillipines, but its Dewey day and night.

LET us then be up and Deweyng, with a heart for any fate; still achieving, still purseweyng, learn to get there, not to wait.—Inter Ocean.

SPAIN'S ARMY AND OURS

Contrast In Military Methods In the Field.

A STUDY OF THE GENERALS.

The Confusion at the Captain General's Office In Havana When the Present Cuban Revolution Started—The Calm at Our Tampa Camp at Present—Condition and Abilities of the Two Forces.

Great is the difference between Spanish and American military methods. A little recapitulation will show it. On the morning of Feb. 24, 1895, there was great excitement and disorder in Havana at the palace of the captain general of Cuba. News had been received of a conspiracy throughout the island against the Spanish government and of the uprising of a small band of not more than 40 men in Havana province under Manuel Garcia, of the presence at Mafianzas of another band composed of 50 men under Betancourt, and also that Bartolome Maso had taken the field near Manzanillo, Santiago de Cuba, with about 200 followers. It was the beginning of the present revolution.

The captain general, Don Emilio Calleja e Isasi, said by the Spaniards to have been a hero and a great military commander during the civil wars in Spain, was bewildered that morning. The news caused him to prepare a decree declaring the island in a state of siege, which he published in the evening; to plan a military campaign against the revolutionists; to frame a truce to propose to them, under promise that Spain would grant Cuba ample and fair reforms.

He summoned to the palace a junta of Spanish authorities, a committee of Autonomists, the colonels of volunteers and many of his personal friends. His desk and two tables near by were covered with maps of the six provinces, reports from the governors of all the important cities, and with many other papers of the kind. He sought advice from everybody and everybody, from the officers of volunteers to the most ignorant Havana shopkeepers, explained in loud voices, gesticulating, puffing and spitting on the marble floor, plans of their own. Nothing practical was done, of course, for many long days, and the revolution grew stronger. Two months after the Spanish cabinet of Canovas recalled Calleja and appointed Martinez Campos captain general of Cuba.

Martinez Campos landed and was received by the Spaniards as a savior. He was the general that pacified Cuba in 1878 and ended the civil war in Spain in favor of Don Alfonso XII. He was said to be a military genius and a man of extraordinary luck. He made some 20 trips around the island, always leaving Havana unexpectedly. He was defeated at Peralejo, and on Dec. 24, 1895, he entered the capital pursued by the triumphant forces of General Gomez, who, without any military organization and with few arms and little ammunition, had marched from east to west at the rear of the Spanish columns.

Martinez Campos, as soon as he reached Havana that day, summoned another junta and, with tears in his eyes, confessed to all that he had been defeated. The confusion was tremendous. The first idea of the Spaniards was to stand by him, the second to kick him out. The volunteers made a great demonstration in his honor and two days later compelled him to resign. Troops marched through the streets without order or concert. As in the times of Calleja, every man tried to have the army adopt his individual plans. Martinez Campos left in disgrace, and Weyler replaced him.

A witness of those scenes of disorder and incapacity cannot fail to observe the contrast between them and the calm order of things prevailing now at Tampa at the headquarters of the American army that within a few days will probably invade the island of Cuba. Everything is done here quietly and well. Judging only by appearance, no one could imagine that in the big hotel here, where so many beautiful women gather in the evening, surrounded by handsome officers and listen to the music of fine military bands, such a serious thing as the invasion of a foreign land is actually being planned.

General Shafter does not make a show as a Spanish general would, pretending that he is too busy to talk to anybody and keeping around him a regiment of officers running here and there with messages in their hands. A foreigner, used to the noise and bustle of the Latin races, has to ask here who the general is to find him. And yet that man, with a simple and severe uniform, contrasting so much with the gorgeous dress of a Spanish general, is polite to all who approach him and of a modest demeanor; that man has studied inch by inch the map of Cuba, as Blanco has never done, and is ready to strike a decisive blow against Spain with the mathematical precision of a chess player moving his men on the chessboard.

That same strange simplicity also impresses the foreigner who has traveled in Spain when he first visits the war department building at Washington. The absence of soldiers at the war headquarters of a nation engaged in war is a great contrast to the hundreds of sentinels that you find everywhere at the Ministerio de la Guerra in Madrid. General Miles, dressed as a civilian, politely receiving you at his office after you send him your card makes a remarkable contrast to the Spanish ministro, dressed in a gala uniform, who deigns to receive a foreigner after making him wait a couple of hours, surrounded by armed soldiers. Spain, with all this fuss, considers herself a great military nation, and yet she has lost all her wars, while this plain, matter of fact nation has never been defeated.

If the moral and intellectual differences between both armies are so great, the Americans are superior to the peninsulars in everything. Intellectual their superiority is no less marked physically considered. Observing the American army encamped at Tampa one cannot discover a man who does not seem physically perfect. When they drill, they present a living example of that ideal army of which Napoleon dreamed so long and which is described by Colonel Wagner in those words: "An army of men having the same physical and moral qualities, the same animating impulses and the same degree of discipline. They are simply machines moved by a scientific impulse. Nothing more perfect can be imagined, and for a man who has seen the Spanish army in peace and war, it does not seem extravagant to say that one American regular is worth at least five Spanish regulars on the field of battle.

It was late in November of 1895 when the Spanish steamer Montevideo brought to Havana 1,569 Spanish soldiers, a part of the 200,000 that have sailed to Cuba to conquer the insurgents. They were said by the Spaniards to be the best troops coming from Spain to Cuba. Martinez Campos had declared his great confidence in them because they were all under 18 years of age. He said:

"Boys, fight better than men."

And what a poor sight they presented to the impartial observer! Sickly, anemic, they traveled in a disorderly way from the pier to the barracks. Two days later they were engaged in a battle with Maceo at Mal Tiempo. Two hundred of them were cut to pieces by the machetes of the Cubans, and they all left their arms and ammunition in the hands of the insurgents. They did not lack courage, but they were absolutely undrilled. They did not know how to use their arms. The modern rifle, of small caliber, with smokeless powder, was of less use to them in the affray than sticks could be. As a rule, they are all such now. They have learned to fire, but they rarely hit the mark. The experience of the insurgent army is evidence enough for this statement.

It is evident, therefore, what the result of the campaign in Cuba will be. Even without the valuable co-operation of General Gomez, who, as soon as his men are all armed, will be able to clear the country of Spaniards, no military man here doubts that the 20,000 American regulars under General Shafter, if that should be their number, can disperse on the battlefields all the troops of Blanco, Pando and Arolas combined, and do so as easily and brilliantly as Dewey disposed of the Spanish fleet and forts that defended Cavite.—New York Sun.

delay in God's service, than in any other form of temptation. Many people are like the man with stone legs as related in the Chinese legend. He would talk eloquently about duty, but was unable to perform it As in the experience of Israel, it is now the case that people find it easy to do their own pleasure, but hard to do work for God. Men are diligent in business, but negligent in doing business for God. It pays to be faithful to Him. Prosperity follows. Godliness hath promise of the life that now is as well as of that which is to come. God is dealing with His people. He is calling them to himself. It is said: "Events are God's hieroglyphics teaching us His will and thought concerning us." In the nation, as well as in the community, God is dealing with His people. Our victosies over another nation may be called glorious, but they will cost us too dear if we, as a nation, do not heed the call of God to consider our ways.

Baptist Chur h.

Rev. Pierce preached a sermon specially to young women in the Baptist Church yesterday, taking as his text the words: "Polished often the structure of a palace." Psalms cxliv, 8.

In the great hall of Karnak stand 134 pillars, 50 to 70 feet high and 9 to 12 feet in diameter, inscribed from base to turret with the official records of Egypt. These pillars, after standing forty centuries in the open air, are read today by scholars of all nations as the best history of that ancient empire. Polished and engraved, they are prominent witnesses of the dead past. Female character of every age constitutes the pillars of society. Nothing rises above the average of female character. When that falls society lowers its standard; when that rises society looks upward and girds itself for a new struggle.

The female characters of the Old Testament are peculiarly prominent for the age. Miriam watched the fate of her infant brother and in the day of his triumph led Israel's daughters in the dance with timbrel. Deborah rousing Barak from inactivity, led Israel's hosts to victory and drove the Midiamite from the land.

Ruth, following her mother-in-law in distress, went forth to gather a harvest and a husband.

Esther took her life in her hand and interceded as a queen for her threatened people, and turned the feet of Israel.

But the New Testament is rich in grand female developments.

"Mary the mother of God," in the days of her suspicion stood up and prophecied that future generations should call her blessed. And it is so.

Anna, looking for the Messiah, was satisfied as she saw the babe in Bethlehem. Mary Magdalen, the strongest character in the Bible, redeemed from ruin, received the first vision of the resurrection.

Before the men had thought of the emergency, the first ladies' aid society ministered to Jesus of their substance. Phydin was the first convert on the continent of Europe.

Christianity has wonderfully lifted woman from the plow to the piano, from the harem to the home. The character of Frances Willard is a pillar of unsullied white in the nineteenth century, having lifted a nation's ideas to a higher level on the subject of temperance and filled the world with the fragrance of her exalted virtue.

Quite an enjoyable time was spent by the Young Ladies Annex of the Beacon Athletic Club of West Berkeley, Saturday evening at their club rooms. Dancing was the chief amusement and ice cream and cake were served during the evening.

Trained Animals as Firemen.

Norris Bros. peerless dog and pony show will exhibit under their big waterproof tents, at the corner of Shattuck avenue and Bancroft way tonight. The company is the largest of its kind in America, numbering over 100 animal actors, all of which have been trained to take their parts in a long and varied program. Great care and kindness has been exercised in the education of these little animals and they will introduce many new acts. Perhaps the most exciting feature of the performance is the work of the animal fire department, which consists of a miniature hook and ladder truck, hose reel and fire engine, each drawn by pretty little Shetland ponies and operated by dog and monkey firemen, who enter a burning building by ascending ladders and after rescuing a number of their fellow creatures, carry out the household effects and finally extinguish the fire. Prices of admission will be: Adults, 25 cents; children, 15 cents.

HEATLH CATECHISM.

To Be Committed to Memory by All Dyspeptics, Invalids, Consumptives.

What is the first cause of nine-tenths of all disease?

Imperfect digestion of food.

Why does imperfect digestion cause disease of other organs?

Because blood, muscles, bone and flesh are derived from the food we eat and digest. If digestion is perfect the blood is pure, nerves and muscles strong, flesh firm. If the digestion is poor, the blood is supplied from half-digested, fermenting food, irritating every nerve and organ. The result is, sooner or later, organic disease, because every organ being poorly nourished the weakest gives way first and we have liver trouble, kidney complaints, heart disease or consumption.

Is not dieting the usual and best treatment to cure indigestion.

No, because the dyspeptic has been starved long enough; what is needed is abundant nourishment, not the lack of it. The stomach and blood demand nutriment, not bran-crackers.

What is the best method of cure?

Plenty of wholesome food well digested.

But how can a weak stomach digest plenty of wholesome food.

By taking with the food after each meal certain harmless remedies which are known to digest food and thus nourish the blood and rest the weak stomach.

What are these harmless remedies?

The most valuable are vegetable ferments, pure pepsin, Golden Seal and fruit salts. All of these are now combined in the form of pleasant tasting tablets sold by druggists under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Are these tablets superior to the various liquid preparations so called dyspepsia cures?

Most decidedly, because all liquid medicines become stale with age and lose whatever good qualities they may have had originally, while the tablet retains its properties indefinitely. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can be carried in the pocket, always at hand ready for use when traveling or at daily occupation. They cost but 50 cents, and should be kept in every family. They keep the digestion perfect and save doctor's bills by warding off disease.

Are Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets adapted to all forms of dyspepsia?

Yes, because in all cases the trouble results from indigested, fermenting food. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets cause the food to be digested before it has time to ferment.

If you wish to know more about them ask your druggist for a package and try them.
